An emotional family who have been waiting for more than three years to see their newborn son have their first proper family photograph were yesterday told that the £20,000 set aside for the baby's first picture could be slashed. Sukhi and Zulfi Baloch have been waiting for an "unprecedented" amount of time since their son was born at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Birmingham on July 17, 2014. Zulfi, 26, from Birmingham, and her husband, who cannot be named for legal reasons, had set aside £20,000 to have a family portrait taken and, after giving birth to their son Nasir, have been waiting for more than three years. Mrs Baloch said she had been advised that their case was not at the "top of the queue" to be dealt with, with some in a "better position than us". She said she and her husband, from Birmingham, are devastated to find out that it is not possible to be paid back their £20,000, which they hoped to have by the end of last year. She said: "It is a huge amount of money to us as a family and we have worked so hard to save it for Nasir. I'm hoping to be able to cover the cost of another picture for him. 82157476af
